

(Clockwise from top) The bedrooms have distinctive flair: The master's king bed is wrapped in velvet turquoise, and the room boasts a Phillip Jeffries wallcovering with panels that seamlessly blend together to create the illusion of clouds, mountains, and water; in a kid's room, a lively Phillip Jeffries pattern on the wall is paired with a custom lavender rug; the main living area has a prime view of the harbor.

IN-TOWN OASIS

A Seaport residence with a contemporary vibe serves as a family retreat.

Photography: Jared Kuzia

Privileged to have sweeping views of Boston Harbor from every room, the homeowners of this Seaport penthouse contacted Mark Haddad, who helms Interiology Design Co., to tailor the tone for the interiors.

Among the driving forces that helped inspire the aesthetic included accentuating the view of the harbor, establishing a low maintenance vibe, and adhering to the homeowners' contemporary taste.

Playing off of turquoise and aqua instead of deeper blues and inserting subtle references to the ocean, the goal was to "give a gentle nod to quintessential coastal New England," says Mark Haddad.

As visitors to the home emerge from the neutral-hued foyer, a ceiling papered with a blue-toned Romo wallcovering in the main living area creates an unexpected punch. The goal here, says Haddad, was for the inhabitants to feel enveloped in the space; to see an explosion of color, while continually playing off the water theme. A curved sofa and round chairs make the space feel less angular. "The furniture plays off of asymmetrical shapes and was specifically chosen for the space to feel softer, not traditionally rectangular or round," says Haddad.

"We're fortunate to work with this specific client," Haddad says. "We've done three homes for them and they're all different. We meet their aesthetic but never duplicate. That's what keeps our job interesting. We really strive to reflect the clients' personality in every project."

To learn more, visit interiology.com.